

Raji Dandapani Executive Director

Raji Dandapani has been the Executive Director of Community Health Clinic in New Kensington, PA since 2010 and responsible for acquiring numerous federal grants that are used toward the development and expansion of services at Community Health Clinic. Ms. Dandapani earned her Masters Degree in Administration from the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Public Health. She also earned a Masters Degree in Applied Microbiology from Barathiar University, India. Prior to Community Health Clinic, she was a Practice Manager at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh and has several years of experience as a Research Specialist at the University of Pittsburgh. Ms. Dandapani's devotion to providing affordable health care has had a positive impact on the entire Allegheny-Kiski Valley community.

On October 25, 2014, at the Human Rights banquet of the Allegheny-Kiski NAACP, the Rosa Parks Award was presented to Raji Dandapani, Executive Director of the Community Health Clinic, Inc. for "leading the charge in providing affordable health care for members of the community." The evening was well attended, including several board members and almost the entire staff of the health center. Raji was clearly moved by the name of the award stating, "I knew about Rosa Parks in the Civil Rights movement even before I came to the US. There was always a parallel to the civil rights movement in this country to the independence movement in India, led by Gandhi.
